POSITIVE CLIENT OUTCOME

> "Thank you for saving me and my kids from being homeless."
> - Priscilla, Legal Aid client

After she was late with rent, Priscilla's landlord accused her of smoking in the unit and threatened her with eviction. Priscilla knew no one in her apartment was smoking – and definitely not marijuana – it was just her and her young children. She was ready to go to court to defend herself rather than lose her apartment and be forced to move. With a Section 8 Housing voucher, any illegal activity on the premises is cause for an eviction.

Priscilla knew she had to do something. "It just didn't feel it was right to be accused of what I was accused of...I would suggest you put up a fight. Have proof that something was or wasn't happening, don't just settle right away."

Fortunately, Priscilla called Legal Aid and successfully had the eviction suit dismissed. She and her children were able to stay in their home and have a stable future.
